- Bank collects the total applicable subscription fees by the Customer, as they are listed to the table 1 and 2 above.
- In relation to the applicable discount percentage, outlined in table 2 above, please note that it is identified based on the total value of the transaction or the total value of the portfolio under management, whichever is the highest.
- As outlined in the “Charges” category of the Key investor information document (KIID), Bank receives an inducement in the form of a percentage from the total management fee charged by Alpha Asset Management M.F.M.C. This percentage can vary from 0% to 50% and it's received for the provision for the investment services provided through Alpha Bank Gold Personal Banking. The amount of inducement received will be determined on the following two factors:
 - i. The retention period of the mutual fund
 - ii. The category of the mutual fund.

The analysis of the amount corresponding to management fee is included in the «Annual costs report», which is sent to the customer on an annual basis and includes all costs and charges. An analysis of the aforementioned amount at any other time is available upon request.
